

Burgundy-Report

Extract from : « A century of Moulin à Vent »

Bill Nanson, 12 october 2017

« 2015 Le Nid, Tradition

A deep nose yet with only very modest volume today. Really a wine of both volume and concentration. Some tannin in here too ! Only slowly releasing a little complexity. Big, complex, not too sweet – this would be a super candidate for the cellar. Excellent !

2014 Le Nid, La Rochelle

More open, a little mushroom. Again hard to follow a 2015, but her is a luxurious texture of deep and fine tannin, more herbed-style flavour, and long flavour. Really, 2014s like this are for cellaring a few years. Very good all the same.

2014 Le Nid, Rochegrès

An open nose, again, faint pyrazine and some floral references. More direct, fresher, the tannin has less depth. From a structural perspective, I like this more than the Rochelle, but the flavor profile with plenty of pyrazine, today, is not my favorite – at least until the finish wich is elegant and very fine. »

